HE IS MISTAKEN

Surveyor of Port of Boston Must Get Out of Politics.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) BOSTON, December 26.—When Jeremiah J. McCarthy, surveyor of the port, opened his mail this morning one letter looked like a bomb. It bore the signature of George B. Cortelyou, Secretary of the Treasury, and called for the resignation of Mr. McCarthy from the Republican City Committee.

The letter is understood to carry the implication that if the surveyor does not care to offer the kind of resignation the Secretary of the Treasury commands, another kind of resignation will be requested. This will call upon him to surrender his job as surveyor of the port while now yields McCarthy an income of $5,000 a year.

The letter is said to be unusually caustic. It says the secretary's attention has been called to the surveyor's participation in Boston city politics, and to the board of his friends in Washington that he would not be interfered with in his political activities. The answer of the secretary is that in this the surveyor is entirely mistaken.

KNOCKS OUT PRIZE FIGHTERS
Private Humphreys and Negro Captain Stand Together on Train.

DENVER, Colo., December 26.—Eighting side by side with Nathan Williams, a negro captain, C. B. Humphreys, of I. Company, Twenty-first Regiment of Infantry, stationed at Fort Logan, knocked out four prize-fighters, a trainer and rubber, and succeeded in holding at bay more than fifty men, who had boarded a suburban train at Grand Central station, after a night fight at the Wayside Inn, and started to row in the presence of a number of United States army officers and their wives and guests yesterday afternoon.

The conductor stopped the train during the melee and telephoned to police headquarters. The train, after a short delay, found that the captain's assistants had jumped off. As a result of the fracas, Humphreys is badly disfigured and disabled. He is under the care of the post surgeon at Fort Logan. Both of his hands were broken by the encounter and it will be two weeks before he recovers.

Williams, the negro, was taken to the police headquarters, where, after hearing his story, he was highly praised by Chief Armstrong and sent home.

In 1868 he built the Bay Sugar Refinery and began the importation of raw material from Hawaii. Prospering in this business he established other refineries, and promoted the beet sugar industry by establishing refineries and engaged in the farming of beets on a large scale. YOUTH CONFESSES Gives Details of His Crimes and Is Willing to Take His Punishment.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) MONTGOMERY, Mo., December 26.—Lying on his cot in the county jail here to-day with his cap cocked on the side of his head and a cigarette in his mouth, Fred Michaels, a seventeen-year-old youth from the State of Iowa, confessed that he robbed the Washburn depot at Salisbury, Mo., and the Chicago and Alton depot at Centerville, Christmas Eve, and that he shot and killed Officer Elmer Magruder and dangerously wounded City Marshal Cain, at Higbee, Mo., who had placed him under arrest as a suspicious character.

He refused to receive the advice of an attorney, stating that he had made his confession that he proposed to tell the truth from this on, and was ready to take his punishment, whatever it was—the gallows or the penitentiary.

The young murderer says he had a good record until ten days ago, when, with two other young men, also of Iowa, he went to Salisbury, Mo., with the idea of securing the necessary money to start a theatrical performance on the road, they conceived and executed the Washburn depot robbery. The trio made their escape with about $50, but were arrested at Higbee, where Michaels shot the officers and made his escape. He then, single-handed, held up the Chicago and Alton depot, at Centerville, Christmas Eve, and escaped the third time with about $50, being arrested yesterday at Mexico, Mo., and brought here to escape a mob.
